Programme

Classroom lessons

Skills developed: speaking, comprehension, business communication skills

The teachers reduce theoretical explanations to a minimum, in order to encourage you to participate actively in the learning and practice process.

For example, a group lesson could include a debate on common business interests while an individual lesson could focus on a job interview role-play or the analysis of an industry-specific article. Case studies give you the opportunity to work on different projects together with other course participants.

Social activities

Skills developed: communication skills, informal conversation practice

You will have even more opportunities to practise what you have learnt in the classroom. A dinner with friends, or an evening at the theatre or pub is an enjoyable way of getting to know the other course participants, and also the local culture.

Results

At the start of the course your language profile is evaluated. We then determine your course objectives and create a study plan to achieve them.

This means we do not waste time relearning language skills you already have. On average you will increase your level of English by 1 CEFR level every 4 weeks (the higher your starting level, the more time is required for each level, and vice versa).

Levels

Group and individual courses are available at all levels from beginners to advanced.

Starting dates and duration

Courses start every week on Monday, and last 1 week, 2 weeks and up to 8+ weeks. You can start an individual course in any week, and there are group courses the entire year from January to December.
