Course Programme

Classroom lessons
Skills developed: speaking, comprehension, business communication skills

The native English teachers try to reduce theoretical explanations to a minimum, in order to encourage you to actively participate in the learning and practice process. For example, a group lesson can include a debate on common business interests while an individual lesson can focus on a job interview role-play or the analysis of an industry-specific article. Case studies give you the opportunity to work on different projects together with other course participants. By researching, discussing and working as a group all of your language skills are used and developed.

Social activities
Skills developed: communication skills, informal conversation practice

You will have even more opportunities to practise what you have learnt in the classroom. A dinner with friends, or an evening at the theatre or pub is an enjoyable way of getting to know the other course participants, and also the local culture.

Results achieved
At the start of the course your language profile is evaluated for the main basic skills. We then determine your course objectives and create a study plan to achieve them. This means we do not waste time relearning language skills you already have. On average you will increase your level of English by 1 CEF level every 4 weeks (note that the higher your starting level, the more time is required for each level, and vice versa).

Course levels
Group and individual courses are available at all levels from beginners to advanced.

Starting dates and course duration
Courses start every week on Monday, and last from 1 week to 4 weeks. Individual courses can start in any week and group courses are programmed during the entire year from January to December.
